GLOW FILM RELEASES DOCUMENTARY SHOWING NASA EVIDENCE FOR LIFE IN THE ATMOSPHERE

GLOW FILM announces the release of NOT ALONE, a documentary film exploring a possible new frontier of biology in Earth's atmosphere. Written and directed by Scott Deschaine, NOT ALONE presents stunning historic footage from many NASA missions to support a unique premise – many unidentified objects in the atmosphere may actually be currently unknown life forms.

Deschaine has produced more than 30 books about wildlife, natural resources, and conservation that have reached over 50 million readers. Now he has produced NOT ALONE to examine NASA evidence for atmospheric life. "I began to study evidence for so-called UFOs using the same scientific principles we use to study wildlife," Deschaine said. He worked with scientists from many fields to gather evidence of a wide range of atmospheric phenomena. "I found amazing parallels between objects in the sky and marine organisms. Some of the most impressive evidence comes from over 50 years of NASA exploration."

Presenting actual footage from many NASA missions, NOT ALONE shows numerous unexplained objects moving through upper reaches of earth's atmosphere. Deschaine claims many of these objects may actually be alive. "Earth's atmosphere has five million times more volume than the planet's oceans," he says. "Like the ocean, the sky may provide habitats for a wide variety of life. Some of the largest and most successful organisms on our planet are marine invertebrates. It makes perfect sense that similar creatures may move through Earth's fluid atmosphere."

During NASA's space shuttle program, astronauts used special cameras to observe the atmosphere. Under certain lighting conditions, they observed and recorded objects that moved and pulsed like marine organisms. NOT ALONE presents highlights of this historic footage. "No one has ever collected this footage in one place, with scientific context and analysis," Deschaine explains. "If these objects are indeed living creatures, it may open a whole new field of scientific study, and provide a sensible answer to the mystery of UFOs."

Deschaine claims his hypothesis can be easily tested. "At every level of the atmosphere, we find evidence of what may be life," Deschaine says. He recently appeared on Travel Channel's "America Declassified," which explored mysterious lights around Marfa, Texas. The team he worked with found evidence the lights may be a new form of bioluminescent life.

NOT ALONE is now available on DVD, Blu-ray, and streaming video. In addition to the main documentary, the DVD and Blu-ray each contain over 90 minutes of rare uncut NASA footage. The website thelivingsky.com provides ordering information and further evidence of living UFOs. "We stand at the frontier of an entirely new realm of life," Deschaine muses. "The amazing NASA evidence in NOT ALONE will help us start to look to the sky with fresh eyes."
